

English

UW-Superior's English Program teaches students to think, read, write, and speak with clarity and depth in a supportive and intellectually engaging atmosphere. English is a major that can lead to rewarding careers in education, communications, business, industry, government, and the public sector. A major in English can also be an excellent foundation for advanced degrees in graduate school or professional studies, such as law.

A key part of the program is the quality of its professors.

- Dr. Raychel Reiff has published numerous scholarly books and articles in professional journals, and she has presented numerous papers at national and international conferences.
- Dr. Hilary Fezzey has published and presented at national and international literature conferences.

- Dr. Nicholas Sloboda has published numerous academic articles on major authors, and he has presented numerous papers at national and international conferences.
- Dr. Wendy Kropid has presented at national and international conferences on English education and literacy.

Majors/Minors

Majors:

- English - Liberal Arts
- English - Secondary Education

Minors:

- English - Liberal Arts
- English - Secondary Education

UW-Superior offers two majors in English.

- Students interested in professions other than teaching enroll in the English liberal arts major. These students study literature, strengthen their writing abilities, and expand their language skills.
- Students who want to pursue teaching careers complete the English Secondary Education major, which prepares them to teach middle school or high school English. In addition to acquiring the skills developed in the English Liberal Arts major, these students also learn teaching techniques, engage in student teaching, and meet all Wisconsin state requirements for a teaching license.

Let's talk English

- Students benefit from small classes and personal attention from professors.
- Faculty teach an array of courses in American, British, and world literature.
- English secondary education majors follow a course of study approved by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction.
- Scholarships are available specifically for English majors.
- Students have the opportunity to interact outside the classroom through the English Club; Sigma Tau Delta, the international English Honor Society; and the Nemadji Review, the student literary journal.
