

Jodi Kohrs is the Director of Prospect Management and Research at Minnesota State University, Mankato. She has been in this position for over nine years. The campus of Minnesota State Mankato is a 350-acre campus overlooking the beautiful Minnesota River Valley and Greater Mankato area. It is a public, master's-level university where supportive teaching and groundbreaking research go hand-in-hand to help people achieve beyond what they thought possible.

Prior to her research career, Jodi spent many years in the hospitality business. Jodi has served on the APRA-MN (Association of Professional Researchers for Advancement MN Chapter) Board from 2007 - 2011. She served in the roles of Vice President and President. Jodi has a bachelor's degree from Minnesota State Mankato and is currently attending graduate classes for her Master's in Educational Leadership. Jodi enjoys spending time with her husband and children (Haley, twelve, and Andrew, nine) and volunteering for various organizations involving her children.