

Lynn Amerman Goerd teaches as an Assistant Professor of Social Work at the University of Wisconsin, Superior. Lynn is new to UWS as of Fall 2011, but has been teaching social welfare policy, community organizing and global issues at area colleges for the past eight years. While teaching, Lynn has also been working in the community as a human services planning consultant primarily in areas of project management, outcome evaluation, grant writing, and assessment. Example clients have included the Region 3 Adult Mental Health Initiative, Life House, Women's Health Center and YWCA of Duluth.

She has been very active locally and regionally for the last fifteen years since moving to Duluth in 1995, particularly with anti-racism and social justice and currently serves as a Board of Trustees for HealthShare and the Northland Foundation. Lynn has both a Master's Degree in Social Work and Doctor of Education from the University of Minnesota, Duluth (UMD).
