The Creative Arts Living Community is designed for anyone interested in the arts. Students benefit from social and academic programming with an emphasis on sharing a love of the arts. The Creative Arts Living Community strives to meet residents’ needs and interests through innovative programs and outside interactions with community members involved in the arts. Members of this community will deepen their interest in the arts while developing connections to the university through their friends, peers and members of the community.

Learning Outcomes
Participants will:
• Participate in artistic interaction, development and promotion
• Form a community focused on a passion for visual and performing arts
• Support the creative growth of members through discussions, programs and trips

• Increase access to and interaction with arts-related communities at the university and surrounding area
• Be in close proximity to Holden Fine and Applied Arts Center

Resident Profile
The Creative Arts Living Community consists of up to 26 students from any course of study at UW-Superior. All residents must:
• Be in a first-year student in any major
• Be in good academic standing (2.0 or higher)
• Be interested in visual and/or performing arts
• Live on McNeill 4

Cost
FREE – funding from the Superior Innovation Initiative covers the cost of programs and trips associated with living in this community.
