

Writing

Major & Minor
Available on campus or online

The Writing Program

UW-Superior's multi-faceted program offers a variety of learning paths. In small, workshop-style classes, students can expect to read widely, brainstorm, draft, give and get feedback and revise in an encouraging and inventive atmosphere. Equal parts hard work and inspiration allow students in the writing program to develop their skills and craft in writing for college and beyond.

The UW-Superior writing program is dedicated to opening students' minds to the many different job opportunities available within multiple industries. Through a major or minor in writing, students:

- Develop personalized strategies for generating ideas, drafting, revising and proofreading
- Engage in all stages of the writing process from invention to publication
- Understand and are able to use grammar and mechanics correctly
- Understand and are able to write for various purposes and audiences in a variety of genres

Find out more about UW-Superior's writing program online at uwsuper.edu/acdept/wls.

Career Possibilities

Employers continue to rank writing as a top skill they expect from college graduates. As writing also applies to all industries, graduates of the UW-Superior writing program gain an upper-hand in the job market. You can open the doors to many career possibilities including:

- Creative writer
- Technical writer
- Editor
- Public relations specialist
- Journalist

- Social media specialist
- Grant writer
- Freelance writer
- Magazine writer
- Copy editor
- Marketing associate
- Multimedia writer
- Magazine columnist
- Book reviewer
- Publications coordinator
- Publisher's representative

UNIVERSITY of WISCONSIN
Superior