

Counseling

UW-Superior's Graduate Studies Program in Counseling provides professional education and training leading to a Master of Science in Education degree in Clinical Mental Health, Marriage and Family Therapy, or School Counseling.

Program Options

The MSE-Counseling and eligible licensure and certifications include:

- Licensed Professional Counselor
- Marriage and Family Therapy
- Licensed School Counselor

Careers

According to a national study conducted by the Georgetown Center on Education and the Workforce, counseling is one of the most employable majors, with graduates enjoying a nearly nonexistent chance of being unemployed. At the completion of their studies, students in the Clinical Mental Health, Marriage and Family Therapy or School Counseling are ready to seek a counseling position in a mental health agency, university or school system (K-12 school certification).

Format

The MSE program is designed for students who wish to become professionals in counseling and related fields. Students engage in two years of intensive professional development, which includes knowledge building and skill acquisition through traditional classroom instruction, practicums and an internship enabling students to professionally apply their acquired skills.

Convenience

Besides being offered in a variety of styles that contribute to effective student learning, classes are offered with students' schedules in mind. Most classes are offered from 4 to 7 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. on weeknights. Some weekend condensed and online classes are also available. Most students complete the program within two-and-a-half to three years.

Dynamic Environment

Fellow counseling graduate students bring sincere interests, real-life experiences, and a strong desire to learn. They work and learn with others who share their interest, motivation and dedication. Students not only learn from the dedicated faculty and staff, but they learn from each other as well.

Facilities

The program is housed in Swenson Hall where students enjoy access to state-of-the-art classrooms with modern technology and inviting work and common areas that enhance the overall learning experience.
